The School offers a secular and independent education, centred on the development of the individual and his socio-emotional skills ('Life Skills education in schools' - W.H.O. 1993) through the promotion of an international culture that can enable the pupil to face tomorrow's world in the best conditions ('Early childhood education and care' - EUROPEAN COMMISSION, 2014) becoming a citizen of the world and an individual without mental, social and emotional barriers.

The educational model makes use of an 'Italian - Anglo-Saxon' dual curriculum to offer a wide range of opportunities and greater freedom in the construction of one's own school career.

The objectives conform to the Italian ministerial guidelines, enriched by indications deriving from the Anglo-Saxon learning system and numerous interdisciplinary projects with a strong international flavour.

The School's methodology envisages the application of the psycho-educational intervention model devised and implemented, for over 15 years, by Dr. Perla Boccaccini (www.perlaboccaccini.it) director of the Centre.
